MEMORANDUM FOR: Commander, 1007th Air Intelligence
Service Group

SUBJECT: Recommendation for Promotion

25X1

1. Airman [Redacted] was assigned more than six months ago to our physiology section as a technician and came under my direct supervision.

2. All duties and personal equipment of this section were completely new in concept and design previously known to the Air Force. The unknown factor of our mission meant that our equipment meant either life or death to our assigned pilots. Without our equipment and the attention to its minutest detail, our mission could not be accomplished.

3. Airman [Redacted] was able to assume the care and fitting of the equipment with the barest minimum of supervision. In addition, he assumed part of the responsibility of training airmen of higher rank and greater basic background ability. His personality exhibited itself in that he was able to contribute to the welding of the group into an efficiently functioning team.

4. When the only officer supervisor was recently lost to the section, Airman [Redacted] at once assumed his greater load of responsibility, literally equal to what one normally would expect only of an officer. Through his direct contribution at this time, there has not been one single compromise of our mission accomplishment.

5. Based on his superior ability and his demonstrated acceptance of responsibility, I recommend Airman [Redacted] for promotion ahead of airmen of comparable rank.
